It is understood the above indicates that the airship is 280 miles from the starting point. The slowness of the journey is attributable to bad weather.

The R34 is constantly conversing by wireless with Clifden, Ponta Delgada and St. John's. She reported yesterday afternoon she was flying at a height of 2,000 feet in brilliant sunshine, above the clouds.

The Air Ministry announces that the R34 signaled at 6:11 this morning that she was approximately halfway to Newfoundland.

The British ship Renown is stationed in mid-Atlantic in connection with the flight.

A considerable modification of the proposed by-law to license the press of the International Settlement which will be put before the special meeting of ratepayers to be held tomorrow was announced yesterday by the Municipal Council.

The new resolution which will be moved by the Council takes the form of a separate by-law and the previous proposal to embody it in the licensing by-law approved by the Consular Body is revoked by an amended resolution which leaves the general licensing by-law as it stood when returned by the Consular Body.

POLAND IS AUTHORISED TO ATTACK BOLSHEVIKI

Ukrainians Reported To Be Murdering Thousands In Their Retreat

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—The Allies have advised the Polish Government that in order to safeguard Eastern Galicia from the dangers of Bolshevist gangs, the Supreme Council of the Allies authorises the armies of the Polish Republic to extend their operations as far as the river Ebrunz.

The Archbishop of Lwow has sent a letter to President Paderewski asking him to inform the Peace Congress that the Ukrainians as they retire before the Poles are murdering priests and defenceless Poles and their victims number thousands. He declares he summons the leaders of the Ukrainian Government before the Peace Conference.

German Activity Reported

London, July 3.—Reuter's Agency learns from Polish sources that the Germans have been secretly fomenting a rebellion in East and West Prussia, Silesia and Posen. The rebels do not recognise the new German Government nor the signature of the Peace Treaty. The Poles are taking military counter-measures. The efforts to provoke the Poles continue.

The Germans attacked on June 23 a number of frontier villages in Upper Silesia. These attacks are part of a plan to create a rising of Poles with a view to obtaining an excuse for instituting massacres.

COURT MARTIAL CASES IN ATHENS CONCLUDED

Those Held Responsible For Attacks On Allies In 1916 Are Punished

(Reuter's Service)

Athens, July 2.—The Court Martial of those responsible for the attacks on the Allied troops in Athens and the Piraeus in December, 1916 have ended.

All the accused have received heavy sentences and Mercuris, formerly the Mayor of Athens, has been sentenced to death.

The sentences constitute the strongest evidence that the Liberal Regime prevailing is unshaken by the veiled threats of the reactionaries, who are decreasing daily. The results obtained by M. Venizelos at the Peace Conference have gone far to convince the opponents of his policy that it was the only policy Greece could have followed.

CELEBRATION OF PEACE IS PUZZLING PEKING

Suggestion That Mandate Be Issued Has Not Yet Been Carried Out

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 8.—The celebration of Peace in China offers some difficulties owing to China not having signed the Treaty. The matter therefore is under consideration.

Lu Cheng-hsiang, the head of the Chinese Delegation in Paris, has telegraphed to the Government suggesting the latter should issue a mandate declaring that a state of war with the Central Powers no longer exists. Mr. Lu's telegram was referred to the Cabinet, which failed to reach a decision. The telegram was then referred to Parliament, but the Senate and House of Representatives sent it back to the Government with an intimation that Parliament is not prepared to accept the responsibilities of the Government and, if the Government submitted a Bill giving its proposed action, Parliament would be pleased to consider it.

The general view in official circles is that such a statement could be made if accompanied by a clear intimation that treaty-relations are not resumed and indicating the procedure necessary for the negotiation of fresh treaties.

London Is Awaiting Trial Of Ex-Kaiser

Understood Former Ruler Is To Be Brought From Holland Immediately

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—The most discussed passage in the Premier's speech in the lobbies was the trial of the ex-Kaiser in London. It was observed how closely the secret had been guarded. It is presumed the tribunal will be composed of British, French, Italian and American judges and will take place at the Law Courts.

It is understood that steps will immediately be taken to secure the extradition of the ex-Kaiser and during his residence in Great Britain he will be under the strictest surveillance.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION IS FEARED IN GERMANY

Strikes Spreading And With Traffic At Standstill Troops Hold Public Buildings

(Reuter's Service)

Copenhagen, July 1.—The growing strike movement threatens to throw Germany into a new revolution. Government troops, as a precaution, have occupied all public buildings in Berlin, where the trams and railway strikes have brought all traffic to a standstill, idling factories and causing food disturbances. There is evidence that a Soviet coup is being planned and thousands of pamphlets from the Budapest Soviet Government have been found in Berlin.

Hertzog, the well-known Spartacist leader, has been arrested.

Rail Men End Strike

Copenhagen, July 2.—The Berlin branch of the German Railwaymen's Union has called off the strike.

Answer To Be Given To Bethmann-Hollweg

Former German Chancellor To Be Tried But Not In Place Of Former Kaiser

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—The Paris correspondent of the Times states that the Allies will probably thank Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg for his offer to surrender and will inform him that he shall be tried but his surrender cannot exonerate the ex-Kaiser.

LLOYD GEORGE'S POLICY SUBJECT OF CONJECTURE

Times Writer Thinks Premier Will Fight For Coalition On Present Basis

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—The parliamentary correspondent of the Times, discussing Mr. Lloyd George's policy, says there are strong grounds for believing that he returned from Paris to fight for coalition on its present basis and to place himself definitely in opposition to the Labor Party in its more extreme demands.

BRITAIN URGED TO LIFT CENSORSHIP ON CABLES

Commons Told All Possible Steps Are Being Taken To Relieve Congestion

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 4.—In a letter to the Times Lord Inchcape urges the abolition of the cable censorship and admission of the use of private codes in order to minimise cable delays and to facilitate the resumption of business.

The Times in a leader supports Lord Inchcape and affirms that Great Britain alone is opposing the abolition of the censorship.

In the House of Commons today, replying to Sir Harry Brittain, Mr. Herbert Pike-Pease stated that the cable companies were taking every possible step to restore the interrupted cables. Special means were being taken to curtail Government traffic and priority in transmission of Government cables by the Eastern Telegraph Company has been suspended except in really urgent cases.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL PLANS ARE NOT TO BE ALTERED

Scapa Flow Sinkings Will Not Effect Change In 1920 Program, Commons Is Told

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Captain Wedgwood Benn, Mr. Walter Long, First Lord of the Admiralty, stated that the British naval construction program for 1920 would not be modified owing to the sinking of the German fleet. He pointed out that our program had already been reduced very considerably prior to the sinking of these vessels. The possibility of the sinking of the German ships had not been taken into consideration in our program but consideration had been taken of the fact that there was no chance of the German fleet being restored to Germany and therfore it ought not to be calculated as a possible enemy but as a possible addition to the fleets of the Allies.

ALLIES IN NORTH RUSSIA ARE MAKING PROGRESS

Forest Fires Are Temporary Check At One Point On Fighting Front

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—A communique from Archangel states:

On the right bank of the Dvina the Allied front has advanced to the river Selmenga. On the left bank the troops are occupying Yakplevsko.

Forest fires forced us temporarily to evacuate the front line on the railway front.

In Murmansk the enemy's position on the railway was assaulted and many prisoners captured. The enemy retreated, burning the bridges.

The enemy's losses on the Shunga Peninsula are reliably estimated at 500.

ACTION IN BERLIN

Ratification Of Terms By Germans Will Put End To Blockade

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 7.—The Council has been engaged in completing the Austrian peace terms but it is not thought they will be ready before next week.

It is intended that the Austrians, after receiving the last secton of the terms of the treaty, shall be given ten days in which to study them. It is also intended, in order to save time, to incorporate in the Austrian treaty all the modifications made in the final draft of the German treaty which would equally apply to Austria, these modifications will be mostly on points of detail.

Paris, July 3.—It is expected that the Austrian Treaty will be signed toward the end of the month.

The Bulgarian Treaty will be tried speedily. Numerous frontier questions have already been settled.

Turkish Question Held Up

Study Economic Questions

Paris, July 3.—The Conference has decided that the International consultation in Economic Matters should continue until the Council of the League of Nations has had an opportunity of considering the present acute position of the economic situation and the Supreme Economic Council should be requested to suggest, for the consideration of methods of consultation which would be most serviceable for that purpose.

Berlin To Act On Treaty

Berlin, July 2.—The National Assembly will probably ratify the Peace Treaty about the middle of July.

Blockade To Be Lifted

Paris, July 2.—The Germans have sent a note acknowledging the intimation from the Allies that the blockade will be lifted after the ratification of the Treaty.

The Germans affirm their willingness to ratify the Treaty immediately and hope at the beginning of next week the National Assembly will take the necessary action and that the clauses in the Treaty will at once be put into force by President Ebert. They hope the release of their prisoners of war will be effected after the ratification.

The Allies are unpledged on this subject.

QUESTION OF CABINET AT PEKING UNSETTLED

Opinion, However, Seems To Be In Favor Of Chou Shu-mou For The Place

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 7.—The Anfu Club has sent a circular telegram to the provincial authorities stating that at a formal meeting on June 28, the Club decided to support Tien Wen-lieh for the premiership.

The Club stated that the President was anxious that either Chou Shu-mou or Tien Wen-lieh should be elected but there was a third party intriguing for the premiership, which might cause Tien Wen-lieh to decline the nomination.

At the same time the Anfu Club asked how could Chou Shu-mou, whose monination was unanimously opposed by parliament, be regarded as a suitable candidate? The Cabinet crisis, therefore, again reached a deadlock and the Anfu Club, being anxious for a satisfactory settlement, urged the provincial authorities to support Tien Wen-lieh in the hope of obtaining his acceptance of the nomination.

Anfuites Said To Have Moderated Demands

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, July 5.—The question of a new cabinet is still under discussion in Peking political circles, although it is reported that so far as the premier is concerned, all opinion agrees on Mr. Chou Shu-mou. At the meetings of Thursday and Friday at which leaders of the Anfu Club were present, including Wang Yi-tang, Tuan Chi-jui and Hsu Shu-cheng, the Anfu members are said to have moderated their demands in the new cabinet, to what degree is yet to appear, but at least to the extent of agreeing on Chou Shu-mou's personal candidacy for the premiership, dependent on his nominations for the cabinet.

It appears that the outcome of the peace negotiations in Versailles has strengthened the hands of the moderate group in the government party, in which Tuan Chi-jui has gained leadership by his strong backing of Chou for the premiership. This group is opposed by the reactionary group, headed by Wang Yi-tang, which dominates Parliament and threatens to kill the new cabinet there unless its extreme demands are met in the nominations.

Signing Has Cleared Way

The signing of peace has cleared the way for a new premier. The fact that the Chinese delegates acceded to the popular will in not signing had brought favor to the present government, represented in the person of President Hsu, himself a moderate, and his candidate, Chou. The fact that probably the Paris delegates acted without the instructions of the government or against them is not accepted by the people who are inclined to accept the current theory that the government party at the last moment was won over to the patriotic view.

Other problems now confronting the government may or may not be decided before a new cabinet comes in. If the compromise suggested by the Anfus in the make-up of the new cabinet takes effect, the policy of the government will not probably change very much under the next regime.

It appears likely that the burden of making a separate peace in Europe and settling diplomatic questions there will be left largely to the three Paris delegates. They have telegraphed to Peking asking for a mandate declaring a cessation of war with Germany. The Peking government has wired to Paris asking the delegates for their opinion as to the future course of foreign relations. President Hsu has meanwhile recorded his continued friendly feelings for China's former Allies by despatching telegrams of congratulation on the declaration of peace to President Wilson and King George.

About The Peace Meeting

The question of the resumption of the negotiations at Shanghai for peace between the North and the South was also considered at the meeting on July 3-4. Telegrams have been received from the two Northern delegates still at Shanghai, stating the willingness of both sides to resume. A report has also been received of a despatch from Tang Shao-yi, chief Southern delegate, to the government in Canton asking that definite instructions as to their wishes in the event of the resumption of negotiations be sent. The eight demands of the Southern party, it is understood, will be modified. As soon as a chief delegate for the North appears the conference can resume. Former Premier Chien has been considered for this office, but in view of his reluctance to re-enter political life, the government is making another effort to induce Chu Chi-chien to resume his office as chief delegate. The government is reported to have telegraphed Chu for his opinion on the subject.

Since the demands of the Southern delegates center around a dissolution of the new parliament in Peking, it seems that the present government party will have difficulty in meeting them on common ground at the outset.

BOTHA ON DEPARTURE PAYS BRITAIN TRIBUTE

Concerning Treaty He Says He Shares Smuts' Sentiments; What Germany Should Do

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—General Botha has sailed for Capetown by the Llanstephen Castle. Prior to his departure he was interviewed by a representative of Reuter's Agency.

He paid a great tribute to the Government and the people of Great Britain to which he is indebted. From the Premier downwards in all quarters, he said, he had found a predominant spirit of co-operation and sympathy for South Africa and it filled him with encouragement and hope. South Africa had emerged from the terrible conflict with her status raised and her destiny assured.

General Botha said he was convinced the peoples of the Empire had played the greatest part of all the peoples in the Alliance against Germany. As an observer from afar and consequently able to take a more detached view in the vast struggle than some of his fellow delegates at the Conference, he was convinced, without disparaging for an instant the French, Italian and Americans, that the part played by Great Britain from August 4, 1914, until this hour was one placing her first among the nations of the earth. Thanks were primarily due to Great Britain for the overthrow of Prussianism and the saving of the world. She had come out of the ordeal of sacrifice with a prestige higher than ever.

Gives Britain First Place

As Great Britain led the war, so she led the peace. He did not pretend to agree with all the peace terms and asked, "Who does?" but he would tell the Germans: "Show by your conduct that you intend to carry out the terms in the spirit and the letter and you will find salvation." Evasion and shiftiness could not well be tolerated.

He shared the sentiment inspiring General Smuts' declaration and urged we should remember that with the victor rests the supreme gift of mercy. Should Germany in the near future produce evidence of changed heart and contrite spirit, it should be the privilege of Great Britain to lead in the mercy of peace. Peace must not be marred by vengeance; vengeance might well be left in a higher hand. "Let it be our great privilege to show mercy to the vanquished enemy if he, in his turn, shows himself truly prepared by deed, rather than word, to confess his faults and to bring forth fruits meet for repentance."

Ideal Of Brotherhood

"I return to South Africa more firmly convinced than ever that the mission of Empire, now and in the future, lies along the path of freedom and high ideals. Great Britain is the cornerstone upon which civilisation must rest. It largely depends upon her action and her spirit whether the new-born League of Nations will be a success. The essence of the League lies in ideal brotherhood, in making the world a better place to live in. In the League the Empire will play the part of big brother and continue its historic role of protector of the weak."

Thus the number of Germans in the Republic does not exceed two and a half million.

The Bolshevist advance on the east front is slowing down owing to General Denikin's successes necessitating the withdrawal of troops, they are now thirty miles east of Ufa.

Military Situation in Siberia

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Omsk, June 17.—The enthusiasm engendered by the military successes which followed on the spring offensive of the Siberian armies, has been followed by keen disappointment at the recent reverses, and while military authorities here feel no alarm for the future, still it cannot be denied that a feeling of depression exists generally. Hopes had been raised that the Northern Army under General Gaida would shortly get through to Viatka and effect a junction with the troops of the Archangel Government, who together would march to the relief of Petrograd, while it was confidently expected that the Western Army under General Mangin would by the end of the summer be in Moscow. These hopes have proved elusive in the face of the stern realities of civil war, with its ever-varying vicissitudes.

Failure Of Western Army

The crux of the situation is the failure of the Western Army. This failure is attributable to a number of causes—mainly to its having advanced too fast, and lost contact with its reserves in the face of a heavy counter-offensive launched by the enemy. It must be confessed, too, that desertions to the Bolshevists took place on a fairly large scale, and a whole Ukraian regiment went over to them after murdering its officers. A fatal mistake in the organisation of the Western Army was that it admitted into its ranks a considerable number of deserters from the Red Army, who acted traitorously at critical moments, and rejoined the Bolshevists. The Western Army finally found itself outnumbered and out-maneuvered, and was forced to retreat from those favorable strategic positions that had been won by the spring offensive. It is very doubtful whether it will be able to recover in the present year the territory lost.

This reverse has reacted on the fortunes of both the Northern and Southern Armies—the latter had practically surrounded Orenburg, and this important Bolshevist stronghold was already in the grasp of the Ural and Orenburg Cossacks, who composed the bulk of this army, when the retirement of the Western Army not only snatched victory from them at the eleventh hour, but involved them in the grave peril of being outflanked and out off. They extricated themselves with the loss of 25 percent of their effectives.

As to the Northern Army, owing to the number of men that were withdrawn to reinforce the Western Army, it has been unable to maintain the rate of advance that should have brought it to Viatka by mid-June, as there were reasonable grounds for expecting a month ago. Exposed as it is to Bolshevist attack on the left flank, owing to the retirement of the right wing of the Western Army on which it rested, its further progress will necessarily be at a very slow rate, or checked altogether for a time.

Grave Situation Seen

There are many here, people whose opinion carries weight, who are of the opinion that unless the Western Army can recover its balance, and resume the offensive in the near future, not even the junction of the Northern Siberian Army with the Archangel forces will be possible in the current year. This would mean a further consolidation of the Bolshevist regime in Russia, and consequently still further increase the difficulties of an eventual advance on Moscow, and until Moscow has been taken by the anti-Bolshevist forces, the overthrow of the Bolshevist regime is inconceivable.

It is recognised in all circles here, military and civil, that German agents under all forms of activity, overt and covert, are supporting the Bolshevist regime in Russia. A prominent Russian official declared the other day that the operations of the Red Army where directed from German headquarters in Berlin, which is of course an exaggeration. But there can be no doubt that German officers are playing a great role in the direction of the military activities of the Bolshevists. Germans see clearly that by the perpetuation of the Bolshevist regime, the whole economic fabric of Russia must eventually be dominated by Germany.

Prolonged Civil War

Judging from the situation as it has at present developed it would seem that the civil war will be carried over the next year, unless circumstances of a countervailing nature intervene, with its concomitant unrest and paralysation of constructive work. Moreover, for Siberia there will loom in the distance the fear of a Bolshevist invasion from Russia. The Red Army has succeeded in stemming the advance of the Siberian Government forces, just as they were penetrating the roads which lead to Moscow; the main portion of these forces have now been hurled back to the foot-hills of the Urals, and the thought is uppermost in the minds of many—what if the Bolshevists break through into Siberia?

The Western Army is now being reconstituted and re-generalled in order to parry this danger.

Omsk, July 5.—The Red Army is driving on the front Perm-Kungur-Krasnoyarsk. The Siberian forces, who are outnumbered, are retiring in orderly fashion. At present fighting is going on 20 versts east of Perm Kungur was occupied by the Bolshevists after a serve struggle in which both sides lost heavily.

Tokio, July 7.—The American Ambassador Mr. Morris, accompanied by his secretaries, is leaving for Omsk today.

Britain And America Are To Aid France If Germany Attacks Her

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—The Treaties respecting assistance to France by Great Britain and America in the event of unprovoked German aggression are published.

Aggression is defined as any breach of the stipulations of the Peace Treaty: namely, Article Forty-two forbidding Germany to maintain or construct fortifications in certain defined areas of the Rhineland and Article Forty-three forbidding the maintenance and assembly of armed forces for military maneuvers as well as the upkeep of permanent mobilisation works in the same area. In the event of any violation of the above, Great Britain agrees immediately to go to the assistance of France.

The agreement is only operative when a similar Treaty between France and America is ratified. The Treaty must be submitted and recognised by the Council of the League of Nations and is operative until the League itself affords sufficient protection.

Before ratification the Treaty must be submitted for approval to the British Parliament. It imposes no obligation upon any of the Dominions until it has been approved by the Parliament of the Dominion concerned.

A further letter and resolution regarding the press licensing by-law was sent yesterday to the Municipal Council by the American Chamber of Commerce and the American Association of China, acting jointly.

This resolution refers to the original proposal of the Municipal Council as printed in the Municipal Gazette for June 26 and the action of these bodies refers to that resolution and to no subsequent alterations that the Municipal Council may take before the ratepayers' meeting on July 10. In this latter connection it was the unofficial sense of the meeting that in case the Municipal Council does alter the original by-laws, sufficient time should be given for printing and circulating same before the ratepayers are asked to vote on them.

The letter follows:

Shanghai, July 8, 1919.

Chairman,
Shanghai Municipal Council,
Shanghai.

Dear Sir.—At a joint meeting of the Executive Committees of the American Chamber of Commerce of China and the American Association of China, representing the major American interest and population in China, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved that this meeting is in favor of some form of justifiable legal control over seditious publications, but cannot support the Amendment to the Municipal By-laws in its present form because it is against American principles and because it will not accomplish the object for which it is proposed."

It was further moved and unanimously adopted that the Municipal Council be requested to publish this letter in the Municipal Gazette and also that a copy of same be supplied to the Shanghai press.

Thanking you for your attention and with best wishes, we are

Very truly yours

Prosecution Closes In Libel Proceedings

Defense Begun In $100,000 Damage Suit Against Chamber Of Commerce

The $100,000 libel suit brought by Tang Ziang-shou, the proprietor of the Chen Yu Products Factory, against the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and its chairman, Chu Pao-san, was again up for hearing yesterday in the Mixed Court, Mr. N. C. Home concluded the case for the prosecution, while the defense, represented by Messrs. G. D. Musao and M. Reader Harris, began its evidence.

Plaintiff alleges that defendants caused to be published in the Sin Wan Pao in December of 1917 an article which styled the plaintiff as a common rogue and swindler, carrying on a fradulant business in Shanghai, Hankow, Wuhu and other places in China and Tientsin.

By way of special damages, plaintiff called witnesses to show that since the publication of the article his business has deteriorated and he had not been able to collect outstanding debts and that the Tientsin branch had to be closed altogether.

The defense was that the article was published on information furnished by one Li Tsu-yai and that defendants did so in the course of their duty to protect the commercial interests in China. Previous to the publication, defendants claim, they had received numerous complaints from various authorities against bogus commercial houses in Shanghai. Defendants denied that the article was published maliciously.

The defendants further stated that at the request of the plaintiff they published in the Chinese press a statement prepared by the plaintiff as a correction of the alleged libelous article. Plaintiff then demanded $2,000 damage, which defendants refused to pay. Proceedings of the case were not commenced until almost a year later, according to the defense.

Another session will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The case is being heard by British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Li.

"Can you make Benger's?"

This was the first question asked of a Nurse by the Matron of a great hospital. The special way in which Benger's must be prepared demonstrates its difference from all other foods.

Benger's Food is not "made in a moment"; it takes a little time, because a first process of digestion occurs, both in the Food and the milk, while you prepare it.

BENGER'S Food

combines milk into a delicious biscuit-flavoured cream with the preliminary work of digestion already done. This means everything to delicate infants, invalids and aged persons!

Benger's is also one of the most highly nutritive foods known.

Benger's Food is entirely British in origin, ownership and manufacture. It is sold in tins by Chemists, etc. everywhere. Carefully follow the directions on the tin when preparing it.

should the return flight be attempted.

There was wonderful interest in today's flight, although it was eclipsed by the previous flights of this seaplane, for in the opinion of American naval officers and the British public generally the NC-4 reached the peak of her great adventure when she spanned the Atlantic at Lisbon. This stage of the journey was regarded by airmen chiefly as a "side show" to attest the firm friendship which the war has cemented between this country and the United States.

Britons Applaud Feat

The pride felt by Americans in the extraordinary feat of the NC-4 finds echo tonight in genuine admiration, expressed by British naval men and airmen for the crew's skill and pluck and the well-worked-out plans of the American navy to facilitate and safeguard the flight.

Early in the morning, when word was flashed that the NC-4 had started on the final leg of her journey, a heavy rain was falling, but shortly after noon the skies cleared and ideal conditions prevailed.

The NC-4 flew in rain and fog through the Bay of Biscay, and fog also was encountered off Brest, compelling the 'plane to keep at a low altitude.

Although news of the progress of the craft was passed along by warships stationed on the way, it was not until noon that word was received from Commander Read himself. His message merely reported his position.

Mayor Greets Aviators

In his first greeting to Commander ran into a thick fog. The NC-4 circled over the shipping in Brest Harbor and then passed directly over the lightship. The journey across the Channel was made at a very low altitude. The seaplane never flew at a greater height than 200 feet and only at 50 to 100 feet most of the way because of the fog.

Bad weather conditions prevailed during the flight across the Bay of Biscay. Nevertheless, the NC-4 kept to her course perfectly, and the trip from Ferrol was made at an average speed of about seventy miles an hour.

Before alighting in the sound the NC-4 circled the Hoe and passed over the spot from which the Mayflower sailed.

After a brief reception aboard the Rochester Commander Read and his crew were taken to the Aroostook, where they doffed their flying clothes before proceeding to Mayor U. P. Brown's reception at the Mayflower stone. The parade leading to the pier was lined with British bluejackets from 'men-of-war and shore stations. Behind the lines of bluejackets was an immense gathering of townspeople.

Malini's Farewell Tonight

Malini, who has already provided lots of joy to audiences in Shanghai, other parts of China and the Far East generally, will give a farewell performance tonight at the Astor House beginning at 5:30 o'clock. The entertainment will be given in the ball room and will be followed by dancing. Booking is at the Astor.

The popular sleight-of-hand man, who is admittedly the best artist in his line to happen into these parts, recently returned to Shanghai from Peking and Tientsin. While in the capital he appeared before President Hsu, thus carrying his art for a second time into the presence of the country's high executive, for he also entertained before President Yuan Shih-k'ai on a previous visit to China. Malini has made a host of new friends and renewed acquaintanceship with a lot of old ones during his present stay and the fact should assure a big house for his final appearance.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

President Hsu Shih-chang has threatened to resign himself unless the nomination of Mr. Chou Shu-mou as the next Premier is accepted by Parliament. The An Fu Club, on the other hand, has declared that if Mr. Chou is nominated, its members will dissolve the organisation and openly admit that the Peking Parliament was illegal and that the President was illegally elected.

In spite the advice of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs not to leave Paris, Mr. Lu Chen-hsiang has gone over to Switzerland. Mr. C. T. Wang is returning to the United States while Messrs. Hu Wei-teh, Alfred Sze, Wei Tseng-tsu and Wang Kwang-chi have returned to their respective offices. Wellington Koo is the only delegate now remaining in Paris.

What future step should be taken regarding China's diplomatic relations is not yet decided. The Diplomatic Commission advocates the despatch of a circular telegram informing all the powers of the reason for not signing the treaty of peace and requesting that the Tsingtau question be referred to the League of Nations for a fair decision.

The Kiangsi Provincial Assembly has passed a resolution to raise $10,000,000 to redeem the Nanchang-Kiukiang Railway as a provincial concern. It has also proposed to issue a kind of railway premium bond for the purpose of amortising the debt.

A Tokio telegram says that Japan is sending a number of warships to the various treaty ports in China. Four will be sent to Shanghai, two each will be depatched to Amoy, Swatow and Wuhu and one each will sail for Changsha, Shasi, Ichang, Hongkong and Kiukiang.

A Presidential mandate Sunday relieved General Meng En-yuan, the Kirin Tuchun, from office and summoned him to Peking. The change is made as a result of the dispute between General Meng and General Chang Tso-lin, whose power and function as Inspector-General of the three Eastern Provinces have been the subject of much opposition from General Meng. General Meng is succeeded by General Pao Kwei-ching, former Tuchun of Heilungkiang, who in turn is succeeded by General Sun Li-cheng, Deputy-Commander of the Fengtien troops and a protege of General Chang.

SPEAKERS IN COMMONS PRAISE LLOYD GEORGE

Premier Commended For His War Work In Address By Labor Member

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 3.—In the House of Commons today, follwing the speech made by the Premier, Mr. W. Adamson, Labor M. P. for West Fife, warmly congratulated the Premier on the accomplishment of the most stupendous task ever confronting the head of a democratic country. Labor always insisted that Germany must make full reparation for the wanton destruction done in Allied countries, he said, and does not agree with the exclusion of Germany from the League of Nations.

They wanted to see the League become as early as possible a real League and not a League of Allied countries. He regretted the Treaty did not contain machinery for the abolition of conscription in the Allied countries as well as in Germany. He hoped that now the Treaty had been signed the Germans would realise that their only chance of peaceful ordered development from the old conditions to the new lay in trying to give effect to the terms of the Treaty.

Sir Edward Carson expressed gratitude to the Premier for the greatest achievement in history. He had done so much that the nation did not care to realise all they owed him in patriotism, courage and genius in carrying on the war. What was the greatest contribution any man in the country had given? He believed history would say with regard to the organisation at home, which meant so much for success in the field, that the nation owed the Prime Minister a debt of gratitude: he had done more than any man to reserve the liberties of the world. At the same time they should not forget the burden borne by Mr. Asquith in the early days of the war. He had an unprepared country and great difficulties in bringing it to a realisation of its responsibilities in the war.

Sir Edward Carson eloquently appealed for the League of Nations. He declared that if it did nothing else it would make peace more fashionable than war.

BELGIUM READY FOR GUESTS

Can Now Feed Tourists, Although Food Prices Are Still High

Brussels, June 5.—Belgium is now in a position to feed any number of tourists who may come to visit the country, owing to a great improvement in the situation during the last few months. Prices are above the pre-war standard, but supplies generally are plentiful, with the exception of certain kinds of meat and milk, the Food Minister told The Associated Press today. He added that Belgium is now well provided as regards bread, potatoes and wheat.

Since March there has been no limit placed on the consumption of bread, which is now of an excellent quality, being made with 82 percent of white flour. Belgium is able to export potatoes to France and has a supply of wheat for the next three months, owing to the activities of the Inter-Allied Food Commission, under the chairmanship of Herbert Hoover. More shipments from America are being arranged and other supplies will soon be imported.

Butter, which now costs 40 francs per kilogram, is likely to go higher owing to the scarcity of milk. It will be recalled that Germans carried off all the milk cows from the country. There is a superabundance of dried beans, and the sugar situation here is far better than it is in France, but sugar refiners fear the importation of Java sugar, which can be sold much cheaper. Beef and pork now cost 12 francs per kilogram retail, but the food department is elaborating a scheme to establish large refrigerators at Antwerp and other cities to accumulate stocks and lower prices.

Incidentally, alcohol is now a drug on the Belgian market, owing to the semi-prohibition measure which is in force. In January it cost 1½ francs per liter, but now the price is 10 centimes. In many places it is being dumped into rivers.

Wherever You Go—Go on Goodyear Tyres

Goodyear Tyres outwear, outdistance and outeconomize most others.

They have unusual inherent resiliency, strength and durability.

They are made to satisfy and protect users—not to be sold at a low competitive price.

Undoubtedly they are the most efficient tyres known for delivering long mileage at low ultimate cost, however, and that is what counts.

We recommend that you fit the famous All-Weather Tread "Goodyears" to your car and watch results.

Ishii Brings Back Household Effects

Ambassador To Italy Picked Now For Next Minister In Washington

Tokio, July 4.—Viscount Ishii, Japanese Ambassador to America, who is expected to arrive in Japan this afternoon will not return to Washington, according to a certain authority well versed in diplomatic affairs, quoted by Hochi and translated by the Japan Advertiser.

"The fact that Viscount Ishii has shipped to Japan the whole of his furniture and personal effects is eloquent testimony of his determination not to return to his post," says the diplomat quoted. "That the Government will try to prevail on him to remain in his post is probable, but it seems to be the preference of Viscount Ishii to express his views on diplomatic questions as member of the House of Peers. It is probable that the new Japanese Ambassador to America will have to be chosen from among the diplomats who have taken a prominent part in the peace conference.

"Of Mr. Ijuin, Ambassador to Italy, and Mr. Matsui, Ambassador to France, the former is believed to be more suited to the post. Mr. Ijuin was councillor of the Japanese Embassy at Washington for some years and while he was Minister to China he was able to maintain most friendly relations with America. Moreover, Mr. Ijuin has been able to contract intimate relations with President Wilson during the progress of the peace conference. On account of these circumstances it is understood that the selection will in all probability fall on Mr. Ijuin."

IMPARTIAL AND PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, JULY 9, 1919

The Council Backs Down, But Not Far Enough And Too Late

THE Municipal Council, compelled by the unanimous outcry against its original attempt to gag the foreign and Chinese press in Shanghai, has modified the amendment providing for municipal licensing of all publications and publishing plants. These modifications are by their very fact a confession by the Council of original error, an enforced acknowledgment of the untenability of its previous position; an acknowledgment all the more eloquent by virtue of its coming only three days after the Council had published an official notification that it "attaches the greatest importance to the passing of the by-laws" in question.

There remains now to examine whether the Council's new position is any less untenable and, if so, in what degree. The modifications, which are printed on the first page of this issue, do eliminate the most offensive, the Prussian, features of the proposal as it stood up to yesterday afternoon. The Inquisitorial powers are largely shorn. So much must be admitted. But the root fact remains. The fundamental principle is not touched. The press must still submit to license. The Council, it is true, limits its power to closing up a foreign newspaper only until it can bring action against the paper in the court of its own nationality, an action which the Council promises to take "forthwith." But that might easily be interpreted to mean two or three days and, in a crisis, those two or three days would be just the time when it would be necessary for a paper to speak; it is in just such times that the public looks to the press for the facts and the guidance on which to base its opinion. And furthermore, a newspaper is not a meatshop. When a newspaper is closed for even one day, it loses more than a day's receipts. Its contracts are vitiated, its right to postal privileges is cancelled, it has lost in the intangibles of prestige and institutional continuity a vast deal.

Also the modified by-law still gives the police the unlimited right of entry, without the approval of the consul of the paper involved. In other words, in a situation such as that of the recent Chinese demonstration, the police can still dictate to a newspaper, even though only temporarily, what it shall or shall not print. And to that this newspaper, at least, objects. It would object less strenuously if the by-law were really necessary or could really be made effective as a protection of law and order. But the arguments previously put forward, that there are already agencies under which objectionable papers can be dealt with and that no amount of licensing will prevent seditious and inciting matter from being surreptitiously printed and circulated, still hold.

Finally, the Council has seen the light too late. There are left now only twenty-four hours for the interests affected and the ratepayers to examine the by-law and to discuss it. There is no possibility now of giving more than a snap judgment. And on an issue of such fundamental importance a snap judgment is both unjust and insufficient. The new by-law on longer analysis may be found to be unobjectionable and reconcilable to the interests of the press. If so, there will be time enough later to pass it. Another meeting can be held later which will give enough time for intelligent discussion and an intelligent decision. That cannot be done in twenty-four hours. There is only one safe and wise course to follow. Defeat the by-law!

The New Greece

(From The Atlantic, a Greek newspaper published in New York)

At the time when the fondest hopes of the Greek nation are realised, the thanks and the gratitude of the entire Hellenic people go to that great American citizen who first put the ban on secret treaties and the recognition of the rights of the small nations on the victorious banners of the Great Alliance.

Without President Wilson the chances of Greece in winning recognition of her just claims were in many instances obscured by the arrangements made previously between the European members of the Alliance, and the old school diplomacy had things so well in hand that one cannot see how it would be ever possible to satisfy Hellas at the expense of the stronger nations who had gotten in the fight before Greece and who had played by far a more important role in the settlement of the great armed enterprise for freedom and democracy.

Americas' intervention, Americas' great sacrifice of blood and treasure, Americas' idealism, more than anything else have helped Greece to win what is her greatest victory at the peace conference. We Americans of Greek blood have no illusions about the powers and ability of a small country to do a big thing. But at the same time we know also that all the power of Hellenism, and all its effort could not have brought about the present results, had it not been for the lofty idealism of President Wilson who took the cudgel in favor of Hellas, because he saw that what the Hellenic race had claimed at the peace table was basd on Right alone.

President Wilson has studied the history of Greece very well to know that whenever Hellas held power, she used it for the liberation of the oppressed and the progress of mankind. The Hellenic democracy that built a Parthenon, the Hellenic Empire that for one thousand years held back the barbarous forces of the East, are the best proof of what the Greeks will do when they are strong.

Hellenic nationalism triumphs today after five centuries in the Near East. Democracy again is establishing the Greek bulwark against the dark forces that are advancing from the north to overwhelm the peoples of the Mediterranean.

And Greece once more taking her place of yore in the Levant unites in blessing the name of the great American President and the powerful Republic he represents, and gratefully acknowledges its debt of gratitude to the triumphing democracies of Great Britain and France, while extending a friendly hand to the neighboring Italian people, in whose name the Government of Rome has just accomplished an act of justice for which the shadows of Mazzini and Santa Rosa will be glad.

Hellas in the Near East aspires at nothing than to become once more worthy of her great past and of her best traditions. That is the only promise the Hellenic people can give today to the Allied democracies of the world and to mankind in general.

First Reid In The Azores

Exploit Of American Captain With Name Of Same Sound But Different Spelling From That Of Read Of NC-4

Coincidental merely but interesting, nevertheless, is the fact that the Azores Islands have once before figured prominently in the history of the naval exploits of the United States, and that the hero of the earlier occasion, though his surname is spelled differently from that of Lieutenant Commander A. C. Read of the NC-4, was also a Reid—samuel C.

On September 26, 1814, while America was waging the war with England to guarantee her freedom of the seas, Captain Reid, commander of the brig General Armstrong, entered into the harbor of Fayal for purpose of obtaining water. In spite of the fact that Fayal was a neutral port, he was attacked by three British ships and was forced to defend himself. The odds were too greatly against him to give him any hope of victory. Captain Reid, rather than let the ship go into the hands of the enemy, destroyed her. Not, however, before he had put up a fight which gave the British a casualty total of over two hundred men out of a force of four hundred. The Americans, who were only ninety strong, suffered a loss of nine men, of whom two were killed.

The following report of the battle was written on October 15, 1814, by an English eyeitness:

"Wm. Cobbett, Esq.—Sir, the American brig privateer, General Armstrong of New York, Captain Samuel C. Reid, of seven guns and ninety men, entered here on the 26th ult. about noon, seventeen days from that place, for the purpose of obtaining water. The Captain seeing nothing on the horizon, was induced to anchor. Before the elapse of many hours his Majesty's brig, Carnation came in and anchored near her. About 6 his Majesty's ship Plantagenet of seventy-four guns and the Rota frigate came in and anchored also. The Captain of the privateer and his friends consulted the first authorities here about her security. They all considered her perfectly secure, and that his Majesty's officers were too well acquainted with the respect due to a neutral port to molest her. But, to the great surprise of every one, about 9 in the evening, four boats were dispatched, armed and manned from his Majesty's ships, for the purpose of cutting her out. It being about full of moon, the night perfectly clear and calm, we could see every movement made. The boats approached with rapidity toward her, when it appears the Captain of the privateer hailed them and told them to keep off several times. They notwithstanding, pushed on and were in the act of boarding before any defense was made for the privateer. A warm contest ensued on both sides. The boats were finally dispersed with great loss.

"The American, now calculating on a very superior force being sent, cut his cables and rowed the privateer close in alongside the fort within half a cable's length, where he moored her, head and stern, with four lines. The Governor now sent a remonstrance to the Van Lloyd [sic] of the Plantagenet against such proceedings, and trusted that the privateer would no further be molested; she being in the dominions of Portugal, and under the guns of the castle, was entitled to Portuguese protection. Van Lloyd's answer was that he was determined to destroy the vessel at the expense of all Fayal, and should any protection be given her by the fort he would not leave a house standing in the village. All the inhabitants were gathered about the walls, expecting a renewal of the attack. At midnight fourteen launches were discovered to be coming in rotation for the purpose. When they got within clear or gunshot, a tremendous and effectual discharge was made from the privateer, which threw the boats into confusion. They now returned a spirited fire, but the privateer kept up so continual a discharge it was almost impossible for the boats to make any progress. They finally succeeded, after immense loss, in getting alongside of her, and attempted to board at every quarter, cheered by the officer with a shout of no quarter, which we could distinctly hear as well as their shrieks and cries. The termination was near about a total massacre. Three of the boats were sunk and but one poor solitary officer escaped death in a boat that contained fifty souls; he was wounded. The Americans fought with great firmness. Some of the boats were left without a single man to row them; others with three and four. The most that any one returned with was about ten. Several boats floated on shore full of dead bodies. With great reluctance I state that they were manned with picked men, and commanded by the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Lieutenants of the Plantagenet; First, Second, Third, and Fourth Lieutenants of the frigate, and the first officers of the brig; together with a great number of midshipmen. Our whole force exceeded 400 men. But three officers escaped, three of which are wounded. This bloody and unfortunate contest lasted about forty minutes. After the boats gave out, nothing more was attempted until daylight the next morning, when the Carnation hauled in alongside and engaged her. The privateer still continued to make a most gallant defense. These veterans reminded me of Lawrence's dying words on the Chesapeake, 'Don't give up the ship.' The Carnation lost one of her topmasts and her yards were shot away; she was much out up in rigging and received several shots in her hull. This obliged her to haul off to repair, and to case firing.

"The Americans now finding their principal gun (Long Tom) and several others dismounted, deemed it folly to think of saving her against so superior a force; they therefore cut away her masts to the deck, blew a hole through her bottom, took out their small arms, clothing, etc., and went on shore. I discovered only two shot holes in the hull of the privateer, although much cut up in rigging. Two boats' crews were soon after dispatched from our vessels, which went on board, took out some provisions, and set her on fire. For three days after we were employed in burying the dead that washed on shore in the surf. The number of British killed exceeds 120 and ninety wounded. The enemy, to the surprise of mankind, lost only two killed and seven wounded.

"We may well say God deliver us from our enemies, if his is the way the Americans fight. After burning the privateer Van Lloyd made a demand of the Governor to deliver up the Americans as his prisoners, which the Governor refused. He threatened to send 500 men on shore and take them by force. The Americans immediately retired, with their arms, to an old Gothic convent, knocked away the adjoining drawbridge, and determined to defend themselves to the last.

Joseph Conrad's 'Atmosphere'

Opening his essay on Joseph Conrad's short stories in The Catholic World with inevitable comment upon the famous Polish writer's passion for the sea, Joseph J. Reilly, Ph.D., launches into some fine paragraphs celebrating the almost uncanny force with which the appeal of Conrad's pictures must strike any sensitive and imaginative reader. To quote a bit:

"During Conrad's twenty years as a sailor he visited the remotest corners of the world and gives us a series of varied and unforgettable pictures; there are far away islands which, a mass of green, 'lie upon the level of a polished sea, like a handful of emeralds on a buckler of steel.' There are rivers whose virgin waters have never been ploughed by a white man's boat, beaches upon whose thundering surf stands the cottage of a Nelson, a Renouard or a Van Wyk, with striped awnings, attractive flower beds, and walks of imported gravel. Again, he pictures a white man's hut smothered amid rank verdure on the squalid edge of a Malay settlement where a hapless discard of civilisation might drag out an uncertain existence. Again, he gives us what he calls ironically 'an outpost of civilisation' far up a lonely river where the boat of some trading company's director finds its way twice a year, and where the deadly heat destroys men's bodies as pitilessly as the contact with savagery and the abandonment of the decalogue destroy their souls. Here is a vivid page from The Lagoon: a white man and his Malay servants are paddling up a tropical river:

"'At the end of the straight avenue of forests cut by the intense glitter of the river the sun appeared unclouded and dazzling, poised low over the water that shone smoothly like a band of metal. The forests, somber and dull, stood motionless and silent on each side of the broad streams. At the foot of the big, towering trees trunkless nipa palms rose from the mud of the bank, in bunches of leaves enormous and heavy, that hung unstirring over the brown swirl of the eddies. In the stillness of the air every tree, every leaf, every bough, every tendril of creeper and every petal of minute blossoms seemed to have been bewitched into an immobility perfect and final. . . . The white man's canoe, advancing up stream . . . seemed to enter the portals of a land from which the very memory of motion had forever departed. . . .

"'Astern of the boat the repeated call of some bird, a cry discordant and feeble, skipped along over the smooth water and lost itself, before it could reach the other shore, in the breathless silence of the world. . . . Suddenly the slanting beams of sunset touched the broadside of the canoe with a fiery glow, throwing the slender and distorted shadows of its crew upon the streaked glitter of the river. . . . Immense trees soared up, invisible behind the festooned draperies of creepers. Here and there a twisted root of some tall tree showed among the tracery of small ferns, black and dull, writhing and motionless, like an arrested snake. . . . Darkness oozed out from between the trees, through the tangled maze of the creepers, from behind the great fantastic and unstirring leaves; the darkness, mysterious and invincible; the darkness scented and poisonous of impenetrable forests.' No man writing today has beheld such a scene as this, or, if he had, could realise it in words with such compelling vividness.

To Make You See

"'My task,' Conrad once wrote, 'which I am trying to achieve is, by the power of the written word, to make you hear, to make you feel—it is, before all, to make you see.' That man is, indeed, blind in soul as in vision to whom this scene, as by a conjurer's wand, is not made palpable as his very body.

"Conrad's, however, is no mere photographer's skill. He can make his scenes impress the retina of the soul no less than of the eye by giving them that something which is baffling, indefinable and yet distinctive, which we call personality in men and atmosphere in scenes. But Conrad's strength is also his weakness. For at times his descriptions become a riot of adjective and colorful substantives which produce upon the reader's mind nothing but a brilliant blur. Such prodigality recalls Ruskin's notorious description of Turner's 'Slave Ship,' regarding which [illegible] color, what nerve, what harmony of things animate and inanimate, as if both brig and sea shared in the youth and beauty and passion of the lovers!

"At the very outset of his stories Conrad gives us their setting. Be it a beach, a tropical river, a swarming Malay village, he describes it opulently, minutely, with a wealth of significant detail which convinces us that his eye is upon the scene as he writes. There is in his work an insistence which reminds one of Poe: Just as Poe exerts a pressure upon the reader's attention in order to achieve the fullest effect of his climax, so Conrad throughout the course of his story insists upon the reality of its setting. On occasions the pressure seems overdone; again, it is so subtle as to leave the reader unconscious of its presence; but all the time it is there. In a word, as I suggested before, Conrad has a genius for creating atmosphere. And that atmosphere is an essential of the story."

The Story Of Paper From The Nile Reed To The Rag-Bag

Maybe the world would be spared much if paper had never been invented, but the damage is now done and we have to make the best of it. But we can at least ferret out the roots of the crime and find who is to blame. Of course they "meant well." When the ancient Egyptians, thousands of years beore the Christian era, were busy stripping the thin fibrous layers from beneath the outer bark of the reed called papyrus, in order that they might have material on which to render their butcher and grocery bills—there were no coal bills then—they little dreamed that in centuries to come our pine-forests would fall under the axe to supply paper for the daily hair-raising "extras" with their pages of crimes and comics. In an introduction to an article on Canada's pulp and paper industry, in the New York Journal of Commerce, J. Newell Stephenson tells interestingly the history of paper.

Referring to the stone obelisks of Egypt, the clay prims and cylinders of Babylonia, and the barks and skins used by the Indians, as the first methods of recording thoughts and messages, he writes:

"All these had disadvantages of one kind or another, so that it became necessary to devise a writing material that could be produced at less expense and in any quantity, and be more convenient. The papyrus, a graceful reed growing in the shallow water of the Nile, proved the magic wand which gave men and nations a substance on which to write their history, convey their thoughts, and make known their wants.

"The papyrus grows from six to ten feet above the water-level. The roots and stalks below water are dried and used for food and fuel. When used for making writing material the flowering top was cut off and the hard outer layer removed from the triangular-shaped stalk. Under the hard shell are several thin yellowish layers from which the papyrus sheet was made. These were peeled off and sometimes bleached in the sun.

"To make the sheet of papyrus, the long strips were laid side by side until a width of eight to fifteen inches was reached. Then the shorter strips were laid crosswise, and the whole moistened with water and pressed. The vegetable mucilage caused the pieces to stick together in a single sheet. After drying on a board in the sun the sheet was glazed by rubbing with a smooth shell or bone. The Romans further improved this material by sizing with starch. Unless bleached, the sheets were a yellowish white. A single sheet was eight to fifteen inches wide and about six feet long. Frequently these sheets were pasted end to end, making a strip sometimes as long as 130 feet, which was rolled.

"Parts of the Scriptures were written on papyrus, which was cut into squares and bound, making what was called a codex. The oldest known papyrus dates from 2400 B.C., although probably used long before that time. Papyrus was largely used as late as the tenth century, at which period parchment was much used, and paper began to appear in Europe. It is from the Latin, Greek, and Egyptian names for this reed that our word 'paper' is derived."

It is recorded that the Chinese made real paper from the pulp of wood fiber two hundred years before the Christian era although it is believed that the inner bark of the paper mulberry was used long before that. Of the early Celestial method of manufacture the writer says:

"The Chinese cut bamboo into short lengths, soaked them in pits until soft, then beat them to a pulp with stamps. The pulp was transferred to a vat, and the sheet was made by dipping out some of the pulp on to a mold. This mold was a shallow tray with a removable edge and a bottom made of reeds. When some of the pulp had been dipped out, the mold was shaken back and forth and sideways, causing the fibers to overlap one another, while most of the water drained off.

"On each side of the vat was a stove with an inclined top of clay. The workman put a sheet on the stove by removing the edge of his tray (the deckle) and laying the paper flat on the stove to which it adhered. He then removed the sheet previously laid on the other stove and repeated the process. A smoother paper was obtained by brushing the sheet with a thin rice starch.

"The Chinese established a mill at Samarkand some time about the sixth century. In 704 the Arabs captured the city and learned the art of paper-making. They had a mill at Bagdad, where paper was made from 795 till the fifteenth century. Large quantities were also made at Damascus.

"Paper was not much used in Greece until the thirteenth century, although it had been brought in by trade and thus introduced into Europe. We have no record of paper being made at this time in Greece.

"The Moors in Spain made the first paper manufactured in Europe. They had a mill at Toledo as early as 1085, one at Jativa (or Xativa) in 1154, and one at Valencia. The earliest European document on cotton paper is dated 1102 (Munsell mentions a manuscript dated 1049 in the British Museum). The Spaniards found cotton-cloth better than raw cotton. Linen was also used at this time, and there is record that old mummy-cloths were sold for paper-making. Among other materials used were hemp and flax.

"An important improvement credited to the Spaniards is the use of water-mills to run the stamps in place of hand-power previously used. By this time wire had replaced the reeds of the Chinese for the molds.

"France had a mill at Essonnes in 1189. The great literary activity of the French about this time, especially a little later, led to great progress in the art of paper-making. For several centuries the French and Dutch made the best paper in Euroep. Paper-making came into Italy from Sicily, whither it was brought by the Arabs. Genoa had a considerable trade in paper in 1235."

The first paper-mill in Germany was established at Cologne about 1300 and that at Mainz in 1320. The German mills were conducted by a master paper-maker and his journeymen and apprentices. The latter were required to be of respectable parentage and to spend four years and fourteen days learning the trade before they could become members of the paper-makers' guild. The ceremony of the admittance of an apprentice to the guild is thus described in The Journal of Commerce:

"At last his apprenticeship was over and he made ready to entertain the paper-makers of his town and neighborhood when they met to vote him into the guild.

"The party gathered around the table while his own master paper-maker answered questions as to his character and fitness. Meanwhile our apprentice waited by the door with a roast calf. When his credentials had been accepted he took in the roast and made a speech, beginning 'With the favor and permission of my worthy masters and journeymen,' continuing with a few verses praising the art of the paper-maker, thanking the company, and closing with: 'With pleasure and the best of my skill, I present to you my roast of good will.'

"Then the young man was subjected to an examination, with questions on the layout of the mill, operation of machinery, preparation of the stuff, etc., after which he was given a certificate. His old journeymen friends now drank in brotherhood with him. The ceremony lasted three days with speeches and music. But the new journeyman had to pay the bill, and as he usually did not have the means, his master would pay it and he would work it off.

"The new journeyman was then free to begin his year of travel, during which he visited many mills, working for his board as he went, till he found a permanent place or a girl to marry, often the daughter of a paper-maker, who would take him into partnership.

"In the fourteenth century these mills used rags, threads, old clothes, and new cotton. Much of the paper made from these materials is now as good as parchment, after five hundred years."

The study of the water-mark, which is supposed to have originated in Italy, is interesting. It is believed to have been first used as a center mark to show when the sheet was half filled. The first mark, which was a cross, appeared in 1282. In 1285 it was used with the letter "B," probably indicating the maker. In the fourteenth century a great number of marks appeared showing the maker, place, quality, to denote the size, or to commemorate some historical event.

In England paper which came from France or Spain was used as early as 1309, but a passage in Shakespeare's "Henry VII." indicates that parchment was used to some extent after 1450. Of the manufacture of paper in England the writer says:

"John Tate is said to have had a mill in Hertford before 1550. A mill at Dartford was described in a poem written in 1565. This mill was run by a German, Spielmann (later Spillman) in 1588.

"The first English patent on paper-making was granted to Hildegard in 1665, 'for making blew paper used by sugar-bakers and others.' In 1675 Barneby took out a patent on paper-making for 'all sorts of white paper . . . a new manufacture and never practised in any of our kingdoms or dominions.' Imports of paper in 1690 amounted to 100,000 pounds sterling a year. Hardly any paper, except brown, was made in England prior to 1688. Mills that were established were not always successful, so that the industry barely had got on its feet in England before William Rittenhouse and William Bradford, a printer of Philadelphia, established the first paper-mill in America in 1690. The mill was at Wissahickon, known as Paper-Mill Run, where there was an abundance of water.

"In 1724 we find the first mixing of paper and politics. Bradford tried to obtain the exclusive rights to the manufacture of paper in the Colony of New York—and failed. In 1728 he started the first mill in New Jersey.

"On Chester Creek, Penn., there stands the original Ivy Mill, built in 1727 by Thomas Wilcox on land bought of William Penn. Paper is now made on the same land but not in the old mill which was, however, in use in 1853, making paper by the same method as that used 140 years earlier.

"Massachusetts seemed more interested in paper-making than New York, for in 1728 a patent was granted to Henchman, Philips, Faneuil, Hancock, and Deering for the sole manufacture of paper for ten years. This was at Milton on the Neponset. In modern phraseology this would be called a 'respectable' firm and well connected. Daniel Henchman, the head of the firm, was a bookbinder and the leading bookseller of Boston at that time; he later became sales agent for a paper made in Maine, as this district was then a part of the Massachusetts Colony. Thomas Hancock was Colonel Henchman's son-in-law and uncle to John Hancock. Benjamin Faneuil was the father of Peter Faneuil, of Faneuil Hall memory. Gilman Philips was brother-in-law to Peter Faneuil."

When the Revolution broke out there were only three paper-mills running in New England, and fifty all told in the Colonies. Rags were scarce and unskilled workmen made poor paper. When the American army entered Philadelphia in 1778 there was a great scarcity of paper for cartridges, and soldiers were sent out to search through the city. In an attic of a house in which Franklin had operated his printing-press they found 2,500 copies of a sermon by the Rev. Gilbert Tennant on "Defensive War."

"This sermon," says the writer in The Journal of Commerce, "was very effectively delivered at the battle of Trenton."

The paper made at that time was all produced with the hand-mold after the manner of the early Chinese paper-makers, and it was not until 1799 that the Foudrinier machine was invented by Louis Robert in France. In 1809 the cylinder machine was invented by Dickinson in Pennsylvania. These two machines were the basis of the machines in use at the present time.

After a review of the development of the industry in Canada—which dates from the establishment of a mill at St. Andrews, Quebec, in 1803—the writer says:

"Let us look at the industry now from the other side and see why it is necessary to our daily life, for this is not the day for unnecessary things. The fact that it assists, directly and indirectly, in the development of our natural resources and that it employs 25,000 Canadians in mill and yard, and approximately as many more in the woods, and pays them more than $20,000,000 annually in wages, is not sufficient reason for its existence. It must, and does, serve the people. One can realise the importance of the industry in this respect by trying to imagine what life would be without the newspaper and the magazine, without books and printed music, without letters of friendship or business, without roofing-paper to keep rain from the settler and his stock, without building-paper to protect his home from the wintry blast and wall board and paper to make it attractive, without the paper-bag for coffee and sugar, wrappings, boxes and cartons for food and clothing and other things, or special papers that minister to numerous daily needs. It is impossible to conceive of such a condition, so we may safely assume that the paper-mill has a real place in our national life."

U. S. NAVY STRENGTH CUT

245,000 Since Nov. 11—Personnel To Be Below 250,000 By July

Washington, May 24.—Ways and means for getting the Navy and Marine Corps strength down to a peace time basis have been the subject of several conferences between Secretary Daniels and his Bureau Chiefs during the last few days. The problem is regarded as one of the knottiest post-war puzzles now confronting the department. Although great progress has been made in demobilising the navy proper since the armistice was signed, thousands of officers and enlisted men still must be released before normal strength is reached. It is believed by officers concerned, however, that at the present rate of demobilisation the numerical strength of the navy will be well below the 250,000 mark set by the Secretary at the end of the fiscal year—July 1.

On May 1 there were 285,000 officers and enlisted men in the service, a reduction since Nov. 11 of 245,000. The figure set for the reduced strength of the navy in the Senate Naval Deficiency Bill of the late Congress was 250,000, and in the House Bill the number was placed at 225,000. Based on a total strength of 250,000 men, naval officials are confronted with the necessity for reducing the officer personnel from more than 20,000 now on duty to less than 10,000 by July 1.

The question of adjusting the rank of officers of the regular navy on the basis of the peace time strength is another puzzle. To meet the rapid increase of the naval establishment during the war practically all of the regular officers were temporarily promoted one or more grades. Getting the navy back to a peace time basis means the majority of these officers must be returned to their former rank.

While a majority of the line officers are said to favor a permanent peace strength much in excess of the authorised 187,000 men, there is nothing to indicate Secretary Daniels will ask Congress to increase this figure. At a recent conference with his advisers the Secretary is reported to have insisted that the reduction be carried out as planned. His promise to the reservists after he returned from Europe that all reserve force members who desired release would be returned to civil life by August was taken to indicate that he intended to abide by his decision.

Major Gen. George Barnett, Commandant of the Marines Corps, said today the marines would have little difficulty in reducing to the normal strength of 26,300 officers and men by July 1.

"We are only waiting for the marines to be sent back to us from the other side," said General Barnett, "before continuing to discharge men. We have released every man we can spare from the forces in this country, and as fast as the 19,000 marines abroad are sent home we will get them out of the service."

Like the navy, a problem confronting the Marine Corps is what to do with nearly a thousand excess officers who must be disposed of within the next month. Most of these officers rose from the non-commissioned grades and will revert to their old status, to be selected for promotion to officer rank in the future as the needs of the service require. All of them are graduates of the Marine Schools and most of them saw service at the front.

General Barnett said that the plan adopted early in the war by the corps of drawing officers from the ranks rather than from civilian life had more than justified itself and that probably it would not be necessary to seek officers from outside for many years.

NATURALIST FOUND APE THAT TALKED TO HIM

'TWAS FAR UP THE CONGO

Returns From Africa With 3,000 Specimens For Smithsonian Institution

New York, May 30.—Professor R. L. Garner, naturalist and student of monkeys, returned yesterday on the steamship Chicago with four tons of specimens for the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, and a description of an animal, a cross between a gorilla and a chimpanzee, which, he avers, was of such high intelligence, that it could talk to a limited degree to natives in the French Congo. He said he brought with his two bodies of the strange animals, after unsuccessfully trying to capture one alive.

The naturalist said he had spent two years and seven months in the French Congo in the interests of the Smithsonian Institution, and had collected more than 3,000 specimens of bird and animal life.

"In all my travels through the jungles, I have never come across such a strange animal as the talking gorilla," he said. "I first heard of the beast from natives in the Congo, who said that a certain region was infested with the animals, with which they had learned to talk after a fashion."

Professor Garner said he induced four natives to accompany him to the habitat of the animals. He said he found they had told the truth, and he himself set about to learn to talk to the moneys, which, in the dark, could be taken for natives, because of their uncanny resemblance to man.

One night, several of the man apes approached the edge of the village and uttered a strange call which sounded like "Waa-booa," Professor Garner said. This, he discovered, was the call of the male for its mate. Interpreted, it meant: "Where are you?" The answering call, given usually by a female, is "Ahoo-ahoo," meaning as Professor Garner said, "Here I am."

Professor Garner said he spent weeks perfecting himself in imitating the call of the female. Then one night he answered the call of a male ape, and, to his surprise, the animal bounded friskily over the ground to where he stood, with his rifle in his hand. He said he shot the animal and brought its body back with him. The ape, he said, was more than six feet tall and weighed about 300 pounds.
